

Bedtime Story for the Little Ones

UNCLE WIGGILY AND SAMMIE'S KITE.

Up and down through Woodland, where the animal folk lived, the winds of March were blowing fast and free. They whistled through the trees, did the winds of March, and around the chimneys, as well as up and down stairs.

"Paw-waw!" cried Uncle Wiggily Longears, the bony rabbit gentleman, as he hurried along to his hollow stump bungalow, holding tightly to his tall silk hat. "Wherever, I hardly have to walk at all!"

And that was true, for the wind blew him so hard that it blew him up the steps, and it blew the dust out of the kerchief and blew the door open for him when he turned the knob.

"Here he comes now!" Uncle Wiggily heard a voice say as he went in his bungalow.

"Yes, that's him!" spoke one one.

"My goodness me, makes alive, and comes here to get a little rest!" thought Uncle Wiggily, shivering like, as he stopped near the hat rack. "I hope the old old Silversides and the Silversides-silversides with the double jointed tail haven't gotten in my bungalow, and hidden to jump out at me if they have they must have poked up Nurse Jane Puffy Wuzzy and—"

But just then Uncle Wiggily heard the voice of his misanthropic lady housekeeper saying:

"Now don't you boys bother Uncle Wiggily too much."

"We won't," was the answer, and then the bunny breathed easier, for he knew it was Sammie Littlebit, the rabbit, and Jackie, the dog, who were in his bungalow waiting for him.

"That you, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Jackie.

"Yes," answered the bunny, hanging his tall hat up on the rack.

"Oh, will you please come out and help us," begged Sammie, running out into the hall. "We've been waiting for you ever so long, Uncle Wiggily, and we were afraid the wind would die out."

"The danger of that!" exclaimed the bunny, who hardly yet had gotten his breath. "It blows like an electric fan."

"That's good!" laughed Sammie, the bunny boy. "Then you can help me and Jackie fly my kite."

"Fly your kite!" cried Uncle Wiggily.

"Yes," went on Sammie. "I have made a nice kite with paper and string, and I've got a long string tied on it and a tail, for it's one of the old fashioned kites. But Jackie and I don't seem to know how to fly it, so we come here to wait for you."

"Please help us," begged Jackie, the dog.

For Constipation! Physic Purge or Laxative?

Everyone now and then becomes constipated, and millions are chronically in that condition. The perplexing question arises—what to use.

Purgatives and cathartics are drastic and usually cause a reaction. Saline waters are rapid in action but do no more than empty the bowels.

Just as certain an effect, and certainly a much more pleasant one, can be obtained by the use of a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin sold by druggists under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It acts gently, without gripping. It is an especially ideal medicine for children, women, old people and others who find purges too powerful.

Only a teaspoonful is required, and by morning the movement is free and complete. A bottle in the house is insurance for the whole family against constipation, indigestion, headaches, flatulency and other digestive ills.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

How To Make Your Own Complexion Treatment At Home

A Free Ointment Prescription Does Its Work Overnight.

New York: "It is my own discovery, and it takes just one night to get such marvelous results," says Miss Edna Wilder, when her friends ask her about her wonderful complexion and the improved appearance of her hands and arms. "You can do the same thing if you follow my advice," she says. "I feel it my duty to tell every girl and woman what this wonderful prescription did for me. Cast aside all the old-fashioned skin treatments! I never tire of telling others just what brought about such remarkable results. Here is the identical prescription that removed every defect from my face, neck, hands and arms. Until you try it you can't form an idea of the marvelous change it will make in just one application. The prescription, which you can prepare at your own home, is as follows: Go to any grocery and get ten cents' worth of ordinary oatmeal and from any drug store a bottle of dewilva. Prepare the oatmeal as directed in every package of dewilva and apply night and morning. The first application will astonish you. It makes the skin appear transparent, smooth and healthy. I especially recommend it for a salubrious skin. Freckles, tan spots, coarse pores, rough skin, redness, wrinkles and to face, every blemish on the face, hands and arms are healed. If your neck or chest is discolored from exposure, apply this combination there and the objectionable defect will disappear as if by magic. It is absolutely harmless and will not produce or stimulate a growth of hair. So much for rough and sandy skin. Here is how rough, or what aches they have had through hard work and exposure to sun and wind, this oatmeal-dewilva combination will work a wonderful transformation in 12 hours at the most."

INFORMATION IN ADVANCE.

(Synopsis of preceding chapters. Gaslene Inglish is an orphaned, trusting, quavering, Dudson Hudson, only and eldest son of Hinkert Hudson, the multi-millionaire, who has been driven from his father's home for quitting college (on demand) had proposed to her the night before and was to come the next evening for his answer. Also, had Amos Sedgwick, the seventh son of the country's wealthiest farmer, Cornelius Sedgwick, proposed to her the night before that she certainly is in a pickle. Both men are handsome, healthy, wealthy and pretty well. What shall she do? Of course, Dudson is disinclined. That makes a difference with him. Then if she marries Amos Sedgwick, she has to live on a farm and raise pigs and chickens. So she finally decides to marry Dudson if his father will inherit him again, and she phones him to write to his father for forgiveness, which Dudson does gladly, if not joyfully. Gaslene then thinks of the way to get the father's reply before Dudson does, so she can answer him according to whether his father forgives him or not. So she dresses in a postman's suit and hides in the willow postoffice mail box. As soon as the postmaster goes out of the room to greet an old friend, Gaslene pops up her head and runs home and jumps out. Hunting favorably among the letters, etc., she finds a letter to Dudson. She opens it and reads: "Hello, 'good-bye' as a reviver or anything, she flopped herself into his arms and said, 'Yes, Dudson, dear, I will marry you whether your father forgives you or not. On my word, I will marry you. Joyously untwining himself from her arms, Dudson shouted, 'Oh, Gaslene, darling! I am so glad! Because this telegram just arrived from father. He says not to read the letter he sent about forgiving me, as he has changed his mind and made a will in favor of my cousin, Chicadee.' Gaslene didn't read the telegram.

TRAVELETTE

THIS DO-TRICK. In the heart of the ruined city of Anuradha-pura is an ancient tree, perhaps the oldest in the world. It was green and flourishing when the giant redwoods of California were saplings, when the Windsor oak was still an acorn. It is the famous Bo-tree of the Buddhists, a branch of the very tree under which prince Gautama obtained the inspiration of Buddhism. A sister of the first king of Anuradha-pura is said to have brought the sacred branch to the city where it was miraculously planted.

Green and living, it stands alone in the ruins of the once great city. Kings and princes have reigned and died, temples and palaces have crumbled, hidden under the green of the forest, but the Bo-tree still stands "green forever" as the ancient prophecy foretold. Pilgrims from the shrine, passing through ruined streets, between crumbling palace walls, to worship at the foot of the tree. Ancient, withered priests still guard the holy spot.

In the broad branches tiny, elf-like monkeys swing and chatter to each other. The aged guardians of the place regard these small trespassers with disfavor but their faith forbids the shedding even of a single leaf. In the sacred shadow of the tree, so the tiny animals swing and chatter to their hearts' content as they have done for centuries. They seem to be tiny priests themselves, as withered and as aged as the more dignified brothers.

At the foot of the tree a figure of Buddha sits with folded arms and furrowed brow. The crumbling image seems to meditate over the general rule about him. The heavy scent of the lotus, drifting through the forest like an incense before a shrine.

"Tummy Wacker" is the name that has been given to English women who have volunteered for war service with the women's army auxiliary corps. The hero behind the fighting lines in France and many of them have won medals for bravery.
